

FORMER GOVERNOR FLAYS ADVANCING ENDS BY UNTRUTHS

Criticizes Such Alleged Action On Part of "Ambitious Governor"

POINTS OUT ERRORS

"Politics In Pennsylvania Has Reached An All-Time Low"

PHILA., May 1 — Speaking as chairman of the Republican Citizens Victory Committee, former Governor Arthur H. James today issued the following statement:

"When an ambitious governor has to rely on untruths to further his candidacy, then politics in Pennsylvania has reached an all-time low."

"During Governor Duff's tour through the Delaware County stronghold of his friend, Political Boss John McClure, the Governor was guilty yesterday of certain flagrant misstatements of fact concerning my administration."

"As quoted in the Evening Bulletin, Governor Duff said: 'During James' administration as governor, not one dime was spent on mental hospitals despite their disgraceful conditions.' The inquirer quotes him as saying that 'James went out of office in shame without spending one cent for the mentally ill who needed assistance.'"

"Governor Duff knows as well as I do that any such statement by him is completely untrue."

"The fact of the matter is that it was during my term that care of the mentally handicapped became a full-scale state responsibility. By-berry was taken over by the state only a matter of weeks before I came to office, and left to me with no provisions whatever for its rehabilitation and maintenance. Five other county-operated mental hospitals, together with a number of other types of county institutions, also were taken over during my administration."

"All this Governor Duff knows perfectly well, regardless of what he now pretends. A good deal of it directly involved Allegheny county, where at that time Duff was a comparatively obscure county-level politician. For example, Pittsburgh was the scene of one of my administrations ventures into a new major field of mental-health work. I refer to the construction and opening of the Western State Psychiatric Hospital, first such state hospital."

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S PHILOSOPHY OF WELFARE STATE SHOULD BE CALLED TO HALT, CLAIMS L. H. FISHER, OF MINNESOTA COMPANY; IS BASED ON APPEALS TO WEAKNESSES IN MAN—FEAR AND LAZINESS

Declaring that President Harry Truman's philosophy of a welfare state should be called to a halt because it is based on appeals to the weaknesses in man... fear, greed, laziness and self-pity... L. H. Fisher, head of the industrial relations department of the Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Company, told Rotarians that it is high time "we appealed to the strength in man... courage, enterprise, industry and self-respect"... when he addressed them at the Elks Home, Thursday afternoon.

"I'm sure that no one here is so far gone as to think we can have a more abundant life in this country through more taxes, more spending, more controls and less liberty," Fisher said.

"You and I have read enough history to know there's an obituary column and a tombstone waiting for every freedom-loving nation that tries to legislate prosperity and security. The darkest hour in any nation's life is when its people sit down to plan how to secure a better life without earning it," the former collegiate basketball star declared.

"It's time we called a halt. There is no federal highway to Utopia. There's no royal road to security, no matter how well they pave it with good intentions. Some of our economic planners have been trying to build one for the past 20 years... but it has led nowhere and has had more ups and downs than a Minnesota detour in springtime. No government can build that kind of road without limiting the ability of its people to make their own way through life. I'm just old-fashioned enough to believe that this ability to do things for ourselves is what has made America great."

"And yet some people in this country have really gone overboard for this so-called economic planning. This is very disturbing to me... as I'm sure it must be to you... because it means that people have been turning away from self-reliance, and bartering liberty for government aid and guardianship. Liberty may mean different things to different people... but I hope we have in mind the kind of liberty Abraham Lincoln had in mind when he spoke in Baltimore in 1864... eighty-five years ago. He said: 'The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty, and the American people, just now, are much in want of one. We all declare for liberty, but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing. With some the word liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with himself, and the product of his labor; while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men, and the product of other men's labor.'"

"More and more, our government... through subsidies, social security, socialized housing and other governmental aids... is making it possible for some of our people to 'do as they please with other men, and the product of other men's labor.'"

"I sincerely believe that many Americans are disturbed by this trend and feel that there is real danger to liberty in this kind of philosophy. Regardless of whether they are Republicans or Democrats, they can plainly see that these activities can only mean a vast increase in power in the Washington Government... power which will enable it either to operate itself in many fields where freedom now exists or to direct in detail the manner in which agriculture, commerce, and industry shall be conducted. Obviously, no business man can ever compete with government, and of course, government entrance into an industry would check all private development.

"Now it isn't my purpose here to make a blanket criticism of our government's efforts to do what it reasonably can to preserve our economic and social gains. Certainly we want leadership that will do everything possible to improve our way of life... but not at the cost of liberty. Even if I could believe that Harry Truman's welfare program stemmed from a sincere regard for individual human rights and dignity, I would still find this philosophy of government disturbing... why? Because it appeals to the weaknesses in man... fear, greed, laziness, and self-pity."

"I think it is high time we appealed to the strengths in man... courage, enterprise, industry, and self-respect. For surely, there is opportunity and reward in this country for every man who is willing to work and apply whatever talents he might possess. But for half a generation now, leaders of government and leaders of organized labor have been appealing to our weaknesses... to the point where their insistence on economic security has led many people to believe that we have an inborn right to it..."

"Personally, I don't hold with that philosophy. I believe we were all placed on this earth for a useful purpose... to use the abilities we have in the best way we know how in order to provide a reasonable measure of security for ourselves and our families. This is neither meant to be religion or rugged individualism... to my way of thinking, it is the way most Americans want to live. This way of life extends a helping hand to those who, through misfortune or acts of God, are unable to provide for themselves."

TODAY MARKS START OF CLEAN-UP DRIVE

Effort To Extend Over Two-Week Period Throughout Borough

COOPERATION ASKED

Today is the time to give a big kick-off to the two weeks Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up drive being sponsored by the Bristol Chamber of Commerce. The men of the organization have worked out the mechanics of the drive—now it is up to every resident to bring the campaign to a successful culmination. It will take the cooperation of every resident to rid the borough of the winter's accumulation of dead grass, leaves, small twigs and larger branches of trees and the general trash that gathers during the days when the thermometer drops into the lower regions.

Rain this morning marred the opening of the drive. Many who had planned to work today about their premises were prevented, due to the rain this morning.

There are many angles to Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up drives, but it is believed the one that should be stressed is the safety that such

Fugitive Turned Over To New York Agents

NEW HOPE, May 1 — A young man of 23, said to be a fugitive from Rykers Island, N. Y., was turned over to New York parole agents on Thursday at Bucks Co. prison.

He is Henry Ajola, who was taken into custody by the state police at Langhorne as a hold-up suspect, and committed to the Bucks County Prison after it was found that he was under parole in New York on an automobile theft charge.

State Police said that John Gramando, of Drexel Hill, was driving along the Lincoln Highway near Janney, when he saw Ajola hitchhiking along the road. Gramando informed police that he had a friend, Ralph Lopez, of Hackensack, N. J., who had been held up recently by a hitch-hiker and robbed of $125. Gramando said that Ajola answered the description of the man who had held up his friend, and he then reported Ajola to the Philadelphia Park Guards, who took Ajola into custody for questioning.

Police feel certain that Ajola was not the man who held up Lopez, but they did learn that he is a fugitive from justice. Two agents took him back to New York City yesterday afternoon, after he had waived extradition.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan (Distributed by International News Service)

The House Committee which proposed dropping excise taxes on camera film is still waiting to see what will develop.

It's a start, but three mothers wired "Come out of the dark room... we'll be waiting in the nursery with our 'luxury' baby oil."

But these babies don't care whether your baby gets oiled or not but any friend of a film pack is a friend of theirs.

In fact more politicians would have come to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association convention if they thought the publishers had brought their cameraman with them.

General Ike made a good speech to the editors and publishers, telling them never to let anything stand in the way of getting the facts... They're making a note of it in case he ever gets to be President.

Right now there's a lot of stuff stirring in Washington they'd love to get the facts on but they're in the files... Or if they're not facts what are they doing in the files?

(By "The Stroller")

It was a girls' softball game between Bristol Township and Council Rock. The score was tied at 16-16 and Joan Fries was at bat for Township. Joan realized that her team needed a run and needed it bad. Joan picked out a pitch to her liking and whalloped it into left field. But Joan could not get to running, even though her teammates were cheering and shouting. Suddenly, Joan began to sprint and made a two-bagger out of the hit. While Joan was sitting on second base, her mates realized what had happened. Joan had been stuck in the mud that had gathered in the batter's box and she made her jaunt to second base after her feet had separated from her shoes.

However, Joan's efforts went for naught even though the double put her team ahead for Council Rock scored twice in the last inning to win, 15-17.

MONDAY, MAY 1, 1950

TODAY

Today marks the opening day of the Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up campaign. And it's a campaign that we can all get in on. The idea of the campaign is to make Bristol a cleaner, brighter more orderly community in which to live!

Let's make Bristol the borough of beautiful homes and lovely neighborhoods. Cleaning is something that everyone can do! Children as well as adults can make valuable contributions in the cleaning department. Property owners, look to your driveways, porches, yards, sidewalks, your lawns and shrubbery. As the ladies already know, clean sidewalks mean cleaner kitchens and living rooms. Everyone can and should take an active part in this campaign to make your home the most beautiful home on the block! Remember, from now until May 15th let's all get busy and clean up, paint up, and fix up!

THREE R'S ARE SAFE

Critics of modern education are firmly convinced that children are not so firmly grounded today in the three R's as they were. Defenders of modern education sometimes seem to enter a nolle contendere to this charge when they reply by pointing to the great strides that have been made in making the child's social development keep pace with his academic progress. But one defender, Dr. George D. Strayer, professor emeritus of education at Columbia Teachers College, meets the charge head-on.

The three R's, he says, are better taught now than they ever were. Children today read more and they read better. They spell better. They write better and what they write has more life in it. Their addition and subtraction and multiplication and division will stand comparison with the results of arithmetic teaching in any previous period.

"People who criticize modern education," he says, "just don't know what children are doing in the schools today." Dr. Strayer does know. Grown old now as an educational expert, he can also look back many, many years and compare the schools of the past with those of today. If he says children are being well grounded in the three R's, he is probably right.

Why, then, does the belief persist that the three R's are being neglected in present-day schools. Partly, no doubt, because parents simply aren't capable of remembering how badly they themselves read and wrote and ciphered when they were 8, like Sally, or 13, like Joe. When they were 8, or 13, they saw themselves with a child's eyes.

Now they judge Sally and Joe with an adult's eyes. The idea that their children should be dumb is inconceivable, naturally. But when they start wondering why Joe and Sally don't do better, they hear that teaching methods have changed since their day.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

(By Courier Staff Member)

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Oct. 31, 1901. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published at Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

PENN VALLEY—The 15th anniversary and crystal wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Williamson Wright was celebrated at their home on Wednesday evening, when many relatives and friends called to offer congratulations.

Mrs. Mary A. Miller, aged 74 years, widow of ... Thomas L. Miller, died at her residence, No. 530 Swain street, early last Saturday morning, of apoplexy. The deceased was one of the oldest members of the Bristol M. E. Church, her membership dating back over 40 years.

William R. McCoy has received the contract to carry the mail from the station to the post office.

Work of improving the park on Burlington Island has been going on for a number of days. The knoll between the river and the buildings has been cut down and graded. The ground will be sowed with grass seed and flower beds laid out.

Work has commenced on the excavations for seven new houses to be built by William C. Peirce at the corner of Pond street and Jefferson avenue. Four of the houses have already been sold.

Trotting for bass in the canal basin has become sport that is attended with considerable "luck." A number of fine specimens have been caught.

While crossing the Forge road bridge which spans the Hollow Creek on the outskirts of the fourth ward, on Monday afternoon, a horse belonging to a carpenter named Muckelhaney, who resides in Bristol township, broke through the planks with both hind feet and was so badly disabled that it had to be killed. The Hollow Creek, at that point, forms the dividing line between the borough and township. In consequence of the accident occurring on the north side of the bridge, the borough will escape responsibility, and the township will be liable for damages.

Ways to Aid Timid Youths

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

YESTERDAY we considered the timid, lonely youth and his sufferings from self-consciousness. We saw that in order to help him we should not tell him it is his own fault but that we should find ways to help him; that we should try to help him see that he does not need to talk much in order to be comfortable and likable. Following up that suggestion, suppose we tell him something like this:

Listen carefully to what others in the group say. Prove that you are interested. You will respond naturally with your eyes, face, entire body. The more wholeheartedly attentive you are, the more each one who speaks will like you. Seeing their approving response to you will make you feel more at ease. Eventually, without any effort at all, you may say something appropriate. Perhaps you will ask a question to induce the person speaking to say more. This question may make you feel relaxed. It might help you, of course, to read the daily newspaper and current magazines with a view to noting one or two items you feel sure would be of conversational interest. After you leave the group and are alone, don't let yourself dwell on what you suppose to be your mistakes or failures. Think rather of your successes. Name them one by one and be proud of them.

Widening Interests

We might, moreover, help this timid, lonely youth see how he can gain satisfactions through widening his interests and social skills; why he needs to make himself acquire such interests and skills, and go more often where other youths are; and why he needs to force himself to do some of the very things he is prone to avoid. Of course we need to set the stage so he may improve in these ways. (My bulletin, "The Lonely, Timid Youth," may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

We parents and teachers can do most indirectly to help the lonely, timid youth as we work through other youths. Wonderful results have been achieved by counselors, teachers, even by parents, through their inspiring some other youths to work on this timid person.

Helping Adult

Accordingly, the helping adult, in a private conference with another carefully-chosen youth of the class or club, will say something like this: "You know Pete. You know how lonely he is and how some other young folk laugh about him and call him queer. Suppose you were in Pete's place. How would you feel? Don't you think you could help build up Pete so as to make him feel more self-respecting, help him feel more comfortable among other youths? Don't you suppose you could induce him to attend more of the school activities? Perhaps you might get him to go out for practice in one of the sports. Sometimes, no doubt, when you and your friends are together for fun, you may hear someone refer to Pete in order to cause a laugh, thereby starting a chain of fun-making remarks about him. I wonder if it has occurred to you how much harm this practice can do, not only to Pete, but also to all who thus make fun of him. Perhaps, next time Pete's name is brought up in ridicule, you may wish to say that you believe this is cheap fun being at the expense of another person. You might help the rest of your group to think of Pete as they never thought of him before, to resolve therefore, not to make fun of him again, but rather to say something good about him, even to consider ways of helping him overcome his fears and become a happy person and better mixer."

HULMEVILLE

A group of young adults gathered in the social hall of Neshaminy Methodist Church on Saturday evening to consider possibility of forming a Methodist Young Adult Association, here. A social time was followed by refreshments, with Mrs. Charles Inglin, Phila., leading in folk dances and games.

The Rev. and Mrs. John C. Kulp have returned to their home. During the absence of the clergyman at evangelistic sessions in Illinois, Mrs. Kulp remained at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Marion, in Philadelphia.

The club of which she is a member will be entertained tomorrow evening by Mrs. C. Wesley Haefner. Mr. Haefner is driving a new Ford sedan.

On Thursday evening the Methodist adult choir will hold its business and social meeting at the home of Mrs. Harold Dassenburg.

President Truman's
Philosophy of Welfare
State Should Be Halted

the bare bones of existence for themselves . . . but it does not, on the other hand, give a man who is allergic to work a better living than the man who works hard and provides his own.

"A lot of careers have been built at public expense with the help of the Administration's appeal to man's weaknesses. It's so popular that for every nine people at work today one is on the government payroll. Are the fruits of our labors so profitable that we can afford to have every ninth person in non-productive work? Do we need so many to do what little has been done in recent years to 'secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity'? If I seem to overlook the fact that our government is also trying to bring about peace in this world . . . it's because I'm just as vitally interested in what is happening here at home. For if the majority of the people in this country are going to go along with the idea that we can achieve a more satisfying life through more taxes, more spending and more controls . . . then we're going to be a lot closer to unrivalling the Liberty Bell than most people think. I'd like to think that it is impossible to unrivalling that bell.

"After having enjoyed for a century and a half the most successful and productive system that ever existed, you might think that we should know all there is to know about what way of life is best for us. You would think that as long as the American economic system can continue to provide a fuller and more abundant life for ever-increasing numbers of people that the people themselves would insist that the system be expanded and continued. In our own lifetime, we have seen two world wars fought and won . . . not through statesmanship . . . but with the miracle of mass production and the blood, sweat and tears of a lot of Americans.

"And now . . . after all-out production to win World War II, and record postwar production to meet the pent-up demand for peacetime goods . . . we are experiencing a return to normal markets in this country. It is apparent to me that government seeks to blame business for the downward trend in the business activity of this country. It would certainly be a fine thing . . . and I'm sure no one would object . . . if we could stabilize the business level at the peak of the post-war boom. Somehow, I get the idea that this Administration thinks it can and should be done, and is apparently willing to spend public money to do it. I wonder. A healthy economy means people at work on productive jobs . . . performing services and creating things that people need and are willing and able to pay for. As for leveling off at the peak of the boom I seriously doubt whether business . . . with all its know-how and productive capacity . . . could do this. Even if it thought it knew how, it couldn't command the necessary capital.

"Drawing from my own experience in negotiating contracts with labor union leaders, I have felt at times that security is very dear to some people . . . to the degree that they want someone to underwrite every conceivable risk to their own skins with no cost or effort on their part. If industry can't do this . . . they feel that government should. I keep telling myself that you can't negotiate security at the bargaining table or at the national level. Security comes from good plans . . . and from good works all the way up and down the line. The best security I know of in this country today is in being a part of a progressive business . . . an organization that provides a needed service to customers and satisfying returns to the people who supply the money, the perspiration and inspiration to keep it going.

"Several months ago, our company announced plans to locate a new plant at Cumberland, Wisconsin. I understand the townspeople staged a minor but spirited celebration when the news came through. Maybe I'm being naive, but I sincerely feel that this is grass roots evidence of the fact that people want the business system we have . . . that they have an essentially good and favorable attitude toward the idea of privately-owned business. I'm sure that there are thoughtful people everywhere who look upon business as a neighbor, who shares their civic pride and who does his part to add prosperity to their home town . . . as a neighbor who provides decent and fruitful employment opportunities for those who seek to be gainfully employed . . . and, as a neighbor who tries to make the on-the-job experience of working as pleasant and rewarding as possible.

"There isn't any question in my mind but what people grow to expect certain standards of conduct on the part of business . . . in bad times, economically, they expect business to assume its part in a program which will help us get back on a sound footing. In good times they expect business to be an equally good citizen and that its management be capable and efficient so as to provide, among other things . . .

"1. a sense of security.
"2. opportunity to advance.
"3. friendly, courteous treatment.
"4. a sense of importance.
"In this sense, though privately-owned and operated, business is indeed a public institution. I can assure you that our company has always tried to be a constructive force in any community in which it operates. We have tried to provide as continuous employment as possible and to plan our sales, our inventory, and production with this in mind.

"If I may be permitted to talk shop for just one more second, I'd like to say we try to compensate employees fairly for the work they do and the contributions they make to the success of the company. It has long been our belief that individual security is best achieved through keeping our company strong and growing and alert to the needs and mutual interests of customers, stockholders and employees. While we think we are on the right track, we do not consider that what we have done is beyond improvement.

"In telling you these things about our company, I may sound a bit boastful . . . but I refer to the case I know best in order to illustrate how businesses all over the country are trying to play by the rules of the game set down for all institutions in a democracy . . . in other words, trying to do all we can to make the system work for the good of all. Actually, there should be very little doubt in anyone's mind that our present economic system is the most productive and best run of any in the world. One look at all the bankrupt nations on the face of this earth should be enough to convince us of this truth.

"If I have unknowingly left the impression that our system is perfect and that all businesses are generous and exist only to provide employment, let me just say this. I am sure that you have run up against the argument that much of business is too big . . . too impersonal . . . and is not beyond taking as much as it can get away with. Maybe the reason some people feel that business is greedy is that they know business is run by ordinary human beings like themselves . . . but we have come a long way from the monopoly days when big business carried a 'public be damned' label. We have recognized the need of placing limitations upon our profit system to insure that the freedom of one would not wipe out the liberties of another. The Lord only knows how many government controls and regulations have been imposed on business to make sure that its dealings with the public and its stockholders are fair and square.

"There's nothing wrong with having someone keep an eye on business to see that it serves its public well . . . and I believe that people generally look to government to fulfill this role. However, I'm sure that the American people do not want a referee who blows the whistle too often or who appears too eager to pick up the ball and run with it. They do want a referee, I believe, who will call every important infraction of the rules . . . and call them loud. I'm sure they want their referee to have enough power to enforce his decisions . . . and if he makes too many bum decisions, I certainly hope we insist on the right to recall the referee. We do have a way of doing just that in this country . . . through elections.

"Everyone here has probably gripped at times about the mounting cost of government. You know, business men have to be sensitive—in fact allergic—to wasteful practices and inefficiencies if they want to continue serving the public. We seem to know how to go about correcting these troubles in our own back yard, but apparently we are notorious amateurs when it comes to controlling costs of our government. I'm sure we have all done the same thing when these inefficiencies of government come to our attention or when some damn fool bill appears to get too much consideration. We get up a full head of steam . . . write a letter to our Congressman . . . or send a delegation to Washington or the state legislature. Too often, this last-minute pressure gets lost in the shuffle with other interested groups . . . and after knocking on too many doors we give up and go home. I've never heard a good definition of lobbyists, but I'm sure that the public has been led to believe that they are the cloak and dagger men in legislative halls . . . the men who pursue an objective until they lose sight of it and then redouble their efforts.

"Perhaps it is unfair to say that all this focus-pocus in the capitol corridors and smoke-filled rooms isn't going to get us any place. I'm sure it will continue to provide a last-minute sounding board for conflicting views and opinions . . . but I'm also convinced that we can no longer count on it to get us on the road to straight thinking fast enough. I believe it is high time we took our lobbying to the crossroads and whistle-stops all over America . . . into the homes and lunch-counters . . . and become as excited and concerned about what happens on the senate floor as what happened in Stromboli.

"I've heard some very sincere speakers say that we must stand up for Americanism . . . and preach Americanism. I'm not so sure that this is what is needed most, for it is my humble opinion that by far the majority of people in this country believe in Americanism . . . and have twice in our lifetime fought for its principles. The job, as I see it, is to expose the dangers to our way of life . . . and point out precisely what happens to individual rights when a paternalistic government promises freedom from almost anything . . . except freedom from the state itself. I appreciate that it isn't easy to get worked up over a trend that hasn't as yet blown up in our face . . . nor as yet seriously changed the pattern of our home life and daily living. But if you doubt that this threat exists, just pick up the official publication of any organized labor group and read the dangerous thoughts that bombard the minds of millions almost daily . . . or study the hog-wash that somehow gets into the Congressional Record.

"The time is overdue for us to put our gregarious instincts to work and get active in discussion groups, PTA's, ward politics, state politics, and national politics. We may even find it necessary to do block work as our volunteer fire wardens did in World War II if we hope to run with the pack of wolves who are no longer on our frontiers but right in our own cities and towns. You'll find that the anti's (this and anti's that are already several jumps ahead of us in this respect . . . and it is going to take a thorough-going rebellion of straight-thinking people in every community to restore at least a balance. If we don't know what to say or where to begin, let's start by dusting off the library copy of the Declaration of Independence and insist that it be read wherever men and women gather to discuss problems of the day. There was a time when it was a most inspirational guide to people who were determined to shore up this land against a rising tide of . . . too much government.

"I'm not a flag-waver, fellows. Nor do I sing the Star Spangled Banner in the bath tub. I'm a family man at heart, just as many of you are. I want my children to grow up in this land and enjoy the same kind of freedom and opportunity that you and I have had. If anything, I would like to see them realize greater opportunity for self-expression. I would be remiss if I didn't feel a personal responsibility for their future. And all of our children together are going to be living here after we're gone. I'd hate to think that they will say of us that we sat on our hands while misguided leaders talked us into mortgaging our futures for a mess of economic planning.

"In closing, let me say that I for one feel that it is everyone's responsibility to actively participate in this battle for men's minds. . . . I am confident that if we can get our thinking straight at home, in the community, and at the grass roots . . . that this insistence on fundamental human rights will be reflected in our capitol domes and government offices in time to keep Harry Truman's boys from hauling down the Liberty Bell. We still have all the weapons we need to rebel against abuses of government . . . we can still speak our minds and vote out of office those people whose arbitrariness in dealing with economic laws have kept us running on a detour too long. In the end, the attitude of the people toward the system we have will be determined by how well American business meets their needs, and by how well people can remember the good things which business has done for them. Public opinion is powerful, but it has a short memory . . . let's jog it every chance we get . . . and in the right direction."

President William Begley was in charge of the meeting with guests present from Bristol, Philadelphia, Rochester, N. Y., and St. Paul, Minnesota.

Lucidi and Giampico
Nuptials Occur Here

On Saturday afternoon at two o'clock a pretty spring wedding took place in St. Ann's R. C. Former Governor Flays Advancing Ends By Untruths

pital in Pennsylvania, and possibly the first of its kind opened by any of the forty eight states.

"Taking only the two years of 1941 and 1942 in my administration, the following moneys were spent from appropriations to the Department of Welfare: Mental institutions, $18,269,000; maintenance of indigent insane, $2,253,000; county mental hospitals reimbursed by state, $965,000; institutions for feeble-minded and epileptics, $3,694,000.

"In addition, $10,000,000 construction funds were made available for new mental-hospital buildings. The World War — which Governor Duff now blandly pretends never took place — shut down priorities before all this program could be completed. But in the case of Byberry alone, to which Governor Duff referred, three large new buildings, costing $3,000,000 and housing 1500 patients, were mainly completed during my term.

"If the only way by which Governor Duff can make a showing is to lie about his predecessors, his situation is desperate indeed.

"Unlike Governor Duff, I entered the Governorship with a huge deficit — no one did for me what Governor Martin and myself did for him: leave a nest-egg of $200,000,000 cash surplus. Nor did anyone do for me what his two predecessors did for him — leave as a legacy for him a great Republican program completely blueprinted and largely financed. His only principle contribution to that program has been trying to jam it through regardless in his term, and borrowing the state blind for that purpose.

"If Governor Duff did not know that the statement he made regarding my expenditures for mental hospitals was wholly false, then he is too incompetent to warrant his asking to be sent to Washington as U. S. Senator. If he did know this statement to be untrue, and defiantly made it anyway, then he is completely unworthy of the trust of Pennsylvania's citizens."

Sextet Serves As Wedding Attendants

flowers which graced the form-fitting bodice of the white satin bridal gown; an alternating flower and leaf motif of the beads encircling the off-shoulder neckline, also the hem of the full skirt and the six-yard train. The yoke was of nylon illusion; and sleeves tapered over her hands. At the center of each orange blossom which formed her head-piece appeared a rhinestone; and from this fell a scalloped net veil of fingertip length. Slippers were of satin. Entering the edifice the bride carried a white prayer book on which rested a white orchid. During the singing of "Mother at Your Feet is Kneeling," she placed a bouquet of mixed flowers at the feet of the statue of the Blessed Mother. For the recession she carried an arm bouquet of calla lilies.

The six young women who served as attendants wore gowns of nylon net over satin, the floor-length skirts having matching satin bows scattered over them. Yokes of nylon illusion provided off-shoulder effect, the nylon net of the gowns being gathered onto the yokes. Their picture hats of horse-hair with satin streamers matched the individual gowns, and each young woman carried a cascade bouquet of roses in contrasting color tones. Slippers were of silver. The matron of honor, Mrs. Chauncey Amadio, 1619 Trenton avenue, a sister of the bride, was attired in blue green. The bridesmaids were: Miss Irma Mazzanti, Lincoln avenue, attired in blue green; Miss Carmella Colella, Beaver street, and Miss Angela Capponi, of Mayfair, in orchid; junior bridesmaids — Frances Mignone, Mayfair, and Barbara Marucci, New York, N. Y., cousins of the bride, in yellow.

Mr. Michael Mignone, cousin of the bride, was best man for the occasion; and serving as ushers were Messrs. Emidio Marucci, brother of the bride, and Robert Virgulti, Wilson avenue.

Three social events followed the wedding. Breakfast was served members of the bridal party at the Marucci residence; dinner at three p. m., at the Parkway Inn was arranged for 100 guests; and in the evening a reception took place in St. Ann's social hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashton, upon returning from a week's sojourn in New York, will reside at 123 Mill street. Travelling costume of the bride consisted of an aqua suit of wool crepe, navy top and matching accessories, and she wore a white orchid. To her attendants the bride presented chokers of pearls and rhinestones; the bridegroom giving his attendants maracasite tie pins. Mr. Ashton is employed by Farragut's Express, and his bride by General Motors Corp., Trenton, N. J.

Choice of Mrs. Marucci, mother of the bride, for the ceremony was a navy blue dress and accessories with trim of white; while Mrs. Ashton, mother of the bridegroom, wore a pink dress and navy blue accessories. Each wore a lavender orchid.

many section chairman have not submitted contributions received to date.

Bristol, $200; Doylestown, $285; Langhorne, $200; New Hope, $185; Newtown, $165; Perkasie, $200; Quakertown, $200.

Pacing the three main drive divisions was the commercial section covering the canvassing of business firms and industries in Philadelphia. Section Chairman, John R. Wanamaker reported a total of $135,130 or 21.7% raised to date.

In second place on the percentage basis was the community division covering the door-to-door solicitation of homes and apartments in Philadelphia with 23.9% or $25,633 subscribed. The report was made by Chairman, John G. Keck.

Running a close third was the suburban division headed by Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Haverford, who announced a total of $39,092 or 23.2%. The section covers Bucks, Delaware and Montgomery counties. Principle speaker of the afternoon was a former patron of The Salvation Army's Men's Social Center, Roxborough, who described the work of the institution in the reformation and rehabilitation of men "down but not out."

Introduced by Captain George F. Forrester, Assistant Manager of the Center, the speaker described his life as an alcoholic and skid-row bum before coming to The Salvation Army. Terming the Army "a friend of all mankind" he discussed the aims of the institution in helping derelicts reform through a program of social and spiritual aid.

The luncheon was opened with an invocation by the Rev. Ellsworth E. Jackson, pastor of the Market Square Presbyterian Church. Salvation Army officials in attendance included Divisional Commander Lt. Colonel A. E. Arkett who pronounced the benediction.

Taking the lead in the Suburban Division on both the basis of percentage and amount subscribed was the Main Line with Chairman, Charles B. Humpton, Assistant Trust Officer of the Bryn Mawr Trust Co., reporting a total of $21,493 or 31.8% subscribed within the first two weeks of the drive.

Setting the pace for the other eight Division groups an estimated 1500 workers are conducting solicitation in the Main Line covering an area from Overbrook to Valley Forge.

Running a close second on the percentage basis is South Bucks County with a total of 29.3% or $24.90 subscribed.

clared their jobs vacant. The strike began that day.

Under the settlement, the men were returned to good standing and the question of extra compensation will now be determined in negotiations for a new contract. Twenty-three other divisions of the union, meanwhile, are negotiating new agreements with the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, of which Western Electric is an affiliate.

The union spokesman said: "Today's agreement was worked out so a new contract could be negotiated without further loss to the men out on strike."

A company spokesman who had taken a leading part in the negotiations said he was satisfied with the strike ending agreement and added, "Now we can get down to brass tacks on a new wage contract."

Division Six had intended to set up picket lines immediately at telephone exchanges but Joseph Beirne, international president, ordered a delay so that other divisions could continue their negotiations in a peaceful atmosphere.

Yesterday Division Six again sent out orders for picket lines unless an agreement was reached before 6

a. m. The announcement of the pact came about 2:30 a. m.

Conferences began at 2 p. m. yesterday with Stetel talking separately and then jointly with Ernest Weaver, president of Division Six, and his aides, and a company delegation headed by John H. MacKenzie, labor relations director of Western Electric.

O Lady, thou art the Mother of Him who pardons, and of those who are pardoned, of Him Who saves and of those who are saved. O blessed confidence! O safe refuge! BRISTOL NOT TO HAVE A TWILIGHT LEAGUE THIS YEAR

For the first time in 26 years, Bristol will be without a twilight baseball league. Even during the war years, the league was kept on, at times with only four teams.

"Bob" Felver, Morrisville High player, has socked two home runs thus far this season. Felver received honorable mention on the voting for the "Athlete of the Year" conducted by the Philadelphia suburban sports writers. George Williams, Norristown, won the award.

Recently, the 50th anniversary of the Jasper basketball team was held in Philadelphia. Among the Jasper players was George "Dippy" Obermeyer, a former resident of Bristol.

"Phil" Richter, former Langhorne High player, is doing hill chores for the George School team.

The recently completed Bristol Bowling Association tournament attracted quite a few bowlers and the boys seemed to hold their own with the bowlers of other localities.

Joe Ashby, last season's Bristol High harrier, pitched and won his first game for West Chester Fresh.

St. Ann's, rained out Sunday, has three games on its schedule for the week, meeting West Trenton here Wednesday evening; Michalski at Trenton, Friday evening; and Atwood A. C. here, next Sunday.

GAME CANCELED DUE TO RAIN

The St. Ann's-Michalski game, scheduled for Memorial field yesterday was called because of rain. The game will be played at a later date. St. Ann's will open its season on Wednesday evening on Memorial Park field, clashing with West Trenton.

RUTH MATLACK WINS POST, FT. WAYNE TEAM

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 1--A graduate of Bensalem Township high school, class of '49, has won a position on a professional girls' softball team. The fortunate lass is Ruth Matlack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Matlack. Ruth, who is a "southpaw" pitcher, passed a preliminary test at Allentown, prior to winning the coveted place on the Ft. Wayne, Ind., "Daisies." She has already joined the team in that city.

Although she did not win the Bensalem athletic award of 1949, Ruth was voted by the class the "most athletic girl." She participated in many varieties of sports.

drives bring to the homes. Old newspapers and other odds and ends which are piled in basements throughout the borough constitute the greatest fire hazard. A carelessly dropped match, or even spontaneous combustion as warm weather approaches, can cause a conflagration that will destroy a beautiful home in a few minutes. It is so easy to get rid of such fire hazards but too many people will not take the few minutes necessary to make their home safe.

Piles of dead leaves and grass in the yard are also distinctly a fire hazard, especially when piled in the vicinity of ash pits. Many residents use their ash pits as receptacles in which to burn trash. They light the stuff and go about their business, giving little thought to what a flying spark might do. If grass is piled nearby a bad fire is almost a certainty.

Other danger points, too, should be taken care of. Dark stairways should be lighted and the winter's supply of galoshes should be put away for the summer.

Another point to be stressed for such drives is the extra value that is placed upon a home if the house and yard is spotlessly clean. A better impression is created among visitors, and Bristol will entertain plenty of visitors this summer. A little work with a paint brush right now will do more than any other one thing to make Bristol a city of beautiful homes.

The Bristol Chamber of Commerce is offering alluring prizes for the most progress in cleaning up the borough. They are doing this as an inducement to make home owners proud of their homes. No one should have to be rewarded for clean-up efforts but the added inducement is all that is needed in some cases to get the job done.

So, today is the day to dig out the rake and the shovel, soften up the old paint brushes and make a start. The drive will run from today to May 15th which is long enough to make a big impression. If everyone pitches in and does his share, the city will be cleaned up, painted up and fixed up.

Don't put off the work. Be the first in your neighborhood to present a shining yard and house for the inspection of all residents. You'll be a much better citizen if you Clean Up--Paint Up--Fix Up now.

EDGELY

A meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of Edgely Fire Co. will be held this evening in the fire station at eight o'clock.
